FNU Reaffirms Long-Term Commitment to the Northern Division

By WATI TALEBULA

By 2027, the Naiyaca Campus will be fully developed, Vice-Chancellor Professor Unaisi Nabobo-Baba announced, as the Fiji

National University (FNU) reaffirmed its long-term commitment to the Northern Division during the Naiyaca Campus (Labasa) Orientation today. The event was attended by FNU Foundation Patron, Na Gone Turaga

Bale na Tui Macuata, Turaga i Taukei Bolatagane, Ratu Wiliame Katonivere, and highlighted FNU's ongoing partnership with the region through the Government-supported Vualiku Programme.

Addressing students, staff and invited guests, Professor Nabobo-Baba emphasised the importance of sustained engagement and development in the North.

“Tui Macuata is the Patron of the FNU Foundation,” she said.

This Vice-Chancellor will ensure that our team will always come to you here in the North, because the Government expects us to be here for the next ten years.”

She explained that the Na Vualiku Project outlines FNU’s long-term presence in the Northern Division, with visible improvements already planned.

“It is called the Na Vualiku Project. You will see us, and you will see the road here improving,” she said.

Professor Nabobo-Baba added that the Naiyaca Campus is on a clear development timeline, with major milestones expected within the next few years.

“By the end of 2027, this campus will be fully developed,” she said.

The Vice-Chancellor also acknowledged the generosity of Tui Macuata, noting that the growth of the Naiyaca Campus would not have been possible without his support.

“We have Tui Macuata to thank, especially for the land that was gifted to the FNU family,” she said.

In his address, Ratu Wiliame emphasised the values of commitment, responsibility and education in shaping the future of the North.

“When you start, that beginning often decides where you are going,” he said, reminding students that their origins do not limit their potential, but they do shape their sense of purpose.

“Like many of you, I did not grow up with everything. There were days when simply getting to school required effort, patience and sacrifice—from my family, from the community, and from the child I was.”

He urged students to view hardship as strength rather than weakness.

“That is not weakness. That is responsibility. And I urge you to live up to that responsibility.”

Ratu Wiliame stressed that education is a collective effort and not merely a personal achievement.

“When you study, you are not studying only for yourself. You are studying for your parents who made sacrifices, for your grandparents who believed in you, and for your community that needs you.”

He further highlighted the role of young leaders in national development.

“This nation needs you as leaders who understand service, responsibility and commitment.”

Ratu Wiliame described Naiyaca Campus as a symbol of hope for the North. Recalling his remarks at the campus’s first graduation ceremony in 2025, he reiterated:

“This campus is more than buildings and classrooms. It is a place where the hope for the North will be made visible.”

“You, the students, are our hope,” he said, adding that leadership is built through character and perseverance rather than comfort or convenience.

“It means gratitude. It means showing up, doing what is right even when it is difficult, and remaining committed even when no one is watching.”

Aiming High

By WATI TALEBULA

Tevita Baleiyasawa Baleibana’s upbringing, shaped by strong family values and community ties, has instilled in him a sense of responsibility and purpose that continues to guide his academic and personal journey.

Tevita is from Naqumu Village in Macuata with maternal links to Nabouva Village in Wainibuka, Tailevu.

He is pursuing Bachelor of Commerce in Industrial Relations, Human Resource Management and Information Systems.

This field was a deliberate choice, motivated by his belief in its capacity to drive national development.

“I chose this field because it offers many opportunities. Considering the current national economy, fields like human resource management and industrialisation play a big role in developing the country’s economy, which motivated me to study this area,” he explains.

Tevita’s is a former student of Labasa College, where he built a strong foundation that continues to support his ambitions.

Beyond academics, he is also the eldest of three siblings, taking on a guiding role for his younger brother, who is also pursuing studies, and his younger sister, who is currently in secondary school.

Reflecting on his current experience, Tevita expresses profound gratitude: “Being here is truly amazing and wonderful, and I’m grateful to the Lord for this opportunity.”

From Setbacks to Success

By WATI TALEBULA

Meresiana Ela is proudly pursuing a Diploma in Animal Husbandry at the Fiji National University (FNU), describing her journey as both meaningful and inspiring.

“It feels very special to be here today. I am grateful for the opportunity to study at FNU,” she shares with heartfelt appreciation.

Originally from Tacilevu Village in Savusavu, Cakaudrove, with maternal ties to Rukuruku Village in Ovalau, Meresiana is the eighth of eleven siblings. Her path has not been without hardship.

In 2012, she faced the heartbreaking loss of her father and two brothers.

She successfully completed Year 13, passing both the Fiji School Leaving Certificate and the Fiji Seventh Form Examination (now known as the Fiji Year 13 Certificate Examination).

Despite her academic achievements, uncertainty about her future led her to remain at home for several years.

Her life changed last year when she met Mr. Saula Koro from FNU during a youth awareness event in Kubulau, Bua.

“We talked and he encouraged me to pursue my studies,” she recalls.

Today, Meresiana is thriving academically and remains deeply thankful for the guidance and support that helped her return to education and pursue her dreams.

A White Coat Dream

By CHRISTAL KAPOOR

Originally from Bharuch in Gujarat, India, and now proudly calling Rakiraki home, Zakira Patel, is on a remarkable journey to becoming the first doctor in her family.

The former Rakiraki Public High School student shared that her parents, both Arabic and Urdu scholars, have been her greatest source of strength and inspiration. She spoke with heartfelt gratitude about the many sacrifices they have made to support her dream of one day wearing a white doctor's coat.

“Ever since I was a child, I have been captivated by the white coat and the critical work done by doctors, not only in my country but across the world. I have always wanted to become a doctor and give back to the country I now proudly call home,” Patel shared.

Patel revealed that she chose the Fiji National University after a school visit conducted by the FNU team.

“I learnt that the programmes were accredited and that the medical school is among the best in the Pacific. From the moment I applied, the process has been smooth, and the staff have been incredibly supportive. Despite this being my first year and only my first few days here, I already feel at ease and even more determined to pursue this career,” she said.

Patel also shared an emotional reflection, expressing her wish that her grandparents, who still live in India, could have witnessed her walking through the gates of the Pasifika Campus as she stepped into a new chapter of her life.

When asked what excites her most about medical school, Patel said she is eager to explore new subjects such as Anatomy and Microbiology, which she believes will shape her understanding of the human body and strengthen her commitment to saving lives.

Patel encourages secondary school students to remain steadfast in pursuing their ambitions.

“Keep working towards your dreams and never doubt yourself or your ability to achieve them. With determination, faith, and the support of those who believe in you, anything is possible!”

Karikaritu Pursues Customs Dream Despite Challenges

By ROMEKA KUMARI

Laitia Ratu Nagelevuki Karikaritu, a 24-year-old has embarked on an inspiring journey driven by determination and a passion for learning at the Fiji National University this year.

Originally from the picturesque island of Kadavu, Karikaritu is currently pursuing a Certificate in Customs at the College of Business Hospitality and Tourism Studies (CBHTS), a step he describes as a significant milestone in his educational journey.

During the orientation at Nasinu Campus today, Karikaritu shared his excitement about returning to university after three years. Having previously completed a Certificate in Community Development from the University of the South Pacific in 2023, he expressed his eagerness to further his qualifications and unlock new opportunities.

Despite facing the challenge of partial visual impairment, Karikaritu remains undeterred.

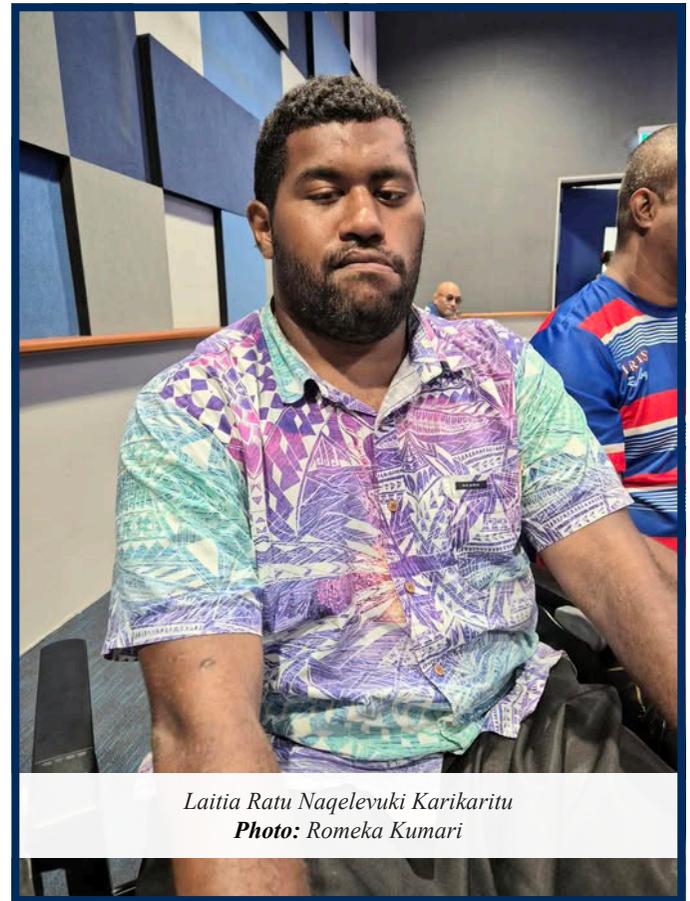

“My dream is to make a meaningful contribution to my community and to prove that no challenge is too great if you are determined enough,” he said.

Karikaritu's interest in Customs stems from his desire to upgrade his skills and broaden his career prospects.

“I believe that education is a powerful tool for change and I hope to inspire others from my community to pursue their aspirations regardless of difficulties,” he said.

Reflecting on his journey, Karikaritu remarked, “Every step I take is a step towards realising my dreams. I want to show others that with passion and perseverance, anything is possible.”

A Dream Rooted in Sacrifice and Hope

By WATI TALEBULA

For Jesnil Singh, a former Xavier College student, acceptance into the Bachelor of Medical Laboratory Science programme is more than an academic milestone, it is the fulfilment of a family dream built on perseverance and sacrifice.

“This was never just my dream,” Jesnil said. “It started with my mum.”

Though the medical science field once felt intimidating, his mother's unwavering belief pushed him forward. “She always told me I was capable, even when I doubted myself.

When I got the acceptance letter and saw her face, that moment made everything worth it.”

Jesnil's father, a farmer, has spent his life working the land to support the family.

Growing up in a modest household taught Jesnil resilience and gratitude. “When I told my dad the news, he cried. Those tears meant years of sacrifice and faith.”

His parents often placed his education above their own comfort, believing it would open doors they never had the chance to walk through. That belief continues to drive him.

As Jesnil begins this new chapter, his goal is clear: “I want to give my parents the life they never had. If I can do that, then their sacrifices were not in vain.”

Carrying his own ambitions alongside his family's dreams, Jesnil steps forward with determination—guided by hope and grounded in love.

By NICOLETTE CHAMBERS

For 20-year-old Leeane Bogitini, stepping into the Fiji National University's (FNU) Natabua Campus marked more than just the beginning of her tertiary studies, but a continuation of a family legacy.

Originally from Savusavu in Vanua Levu, Bogitini is the eldest of six siblings. With that role comes responsibility to set an example for those who look up to her.

A former student of Lomaivuna Secondary School in Naitasiri, she is now pursuing a Bachelor of Education (Secondary), (History and Geography).

Growing up in a family of educators, she was surrounded by marking papers and conversations about shaping and inspiring young minds to become good citizens and successful people in life.

Her greatest inspiration, however, has been her father. With his words of advice to not only select a teaching programme but to contribute meaningfully to the development of Fiji through education.

"I've always wanted to become a teacher," she shared.

"It's something that was inspired by my father and my family. I see it as a way I can give back and help shape the future of our country."

She said moving to Natabua Campus has brought new experiences and challenges for her as she is living away from her family for the first time, presently still adjusting to hostel life.

"It is not easy, but I am determined to cope with it by building friendships, staying focused on my studies and embracing the independence that comes with university life," she added.

Ali Fulfills Promise to Late Mum

By NICOLETTE CHAMBERS

When Iftiyab Taiyaz Ali's mother was still with him, he made a promise to her to pursue a programme at a university close to their family home in Ba.

Ali did just that and enrolled into the programme, Bachelor of Education (Secondary) (Industrial Arts) at the Fiji National University's Ba Campus. However, he sadly lost his mother last month.

A former student of Kamil Muslim College, Ali said he is content that this programme also aligned with his aspirations of becoming a teacher.

He said the offering of this programme for the first time at FNU's Ba Campus was timely for him.

"I was looking after my mother," he said.

"I made a promise to her that I would study nearby to home as I was her carer and I am glad I enrolled into this programme, I am sad however as she is not present to witness me begin this journey.

"My passion was also to become a teacher."

Ali is the only child in the family and resides with his father.

His advice to the youth of today is 'focus on your goals and ensure your time is balanced'.

Two friends, Two Dreams, One Journey at FNU

By NICOLETTE CHAMBERS

Family friends, Navnita Devi and Priyanshu Singh, are proudly living their dreams at the Fiji National University (FNU), Bonunaqwele Nadi Campus.

Now first-year students, the 18-year-olds are working towards completing their programmes.

Devi is pursuing a Certificate in Cookery (Level 3) while Singh is taking on a Bachelor of Commerce in Economics and Finance.

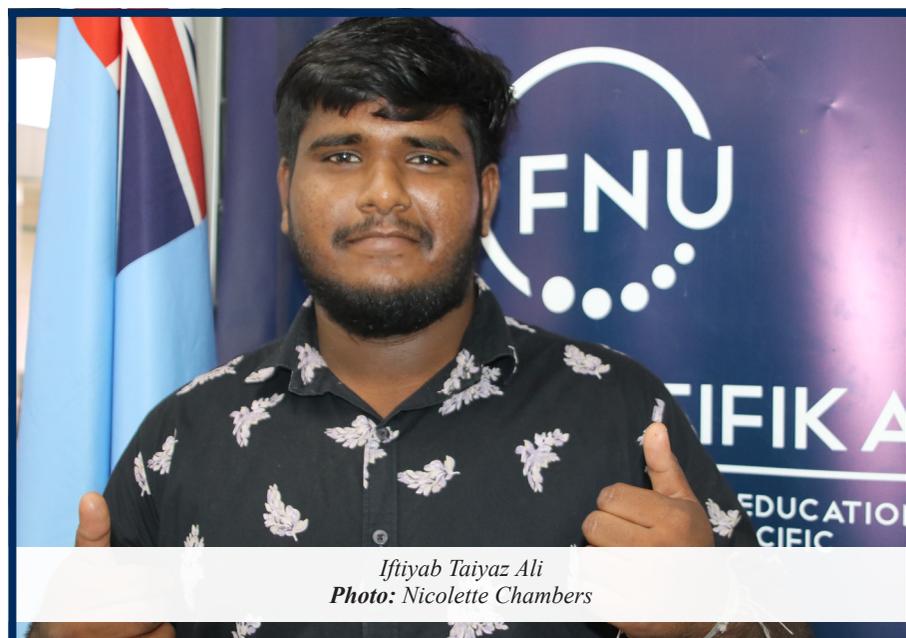

Originally from Kavanagasau in Sigatoka, the pair are grateful to be studying at FNU's Bonunaqwele Nadi Campus, where their aspirations are beginning to take shape.

"I would also be in the kitchen cooking up a storm at home, and so that was the humble beginning for me and knew where my heart truly belonged – in a kitchen," said Devi.

Singh, however, is following in the footsteps of her brother-in-law who is also in the same field.

Now residing in Nadi and away from their families is a new challenge for them, but with the right support they are confident to go through this journey successfully.

Nigerian National Eager to Upskill at FNU

By ROMEKA KUMARI

Leaving home is never easy, but for Nigerian national Tagbo Nonso Sylvester, the journey to Fiji represents hope and ambition. He has travelled thousands of kilometres to pursue a Certificate IV in Joinery and Cabinet Making at FNU’s College of Engineering and Technical, Vocational, Education and Training (CETVET)

Though only four days in Fiji, Sylvester already feels at home.

“The people are welcoming, the environment is peaceful, and even the weather reminds me of Nigeria,” he said.

A skilled furniture maker, he chose FNU to refine his craft and gain international exposure. “I wanted to improve my technical knowledge and learn modern techniques. This qualification will help me raise my standards and expand opportunities,” he shared.

While leaving his wife and young son behind was difficult, they remain his greatest motivation.

Determined to succeed, Sylvester hopes to return home with new skills and confidence to build something meaningful for his family and community. “This opportunity means everything to me. FNU has opened a door, and I am ready to make the most of it.”

Tongan Trio Embark on Their Medical Journey

By CHRISTAL KAPOOR

Melenaite Vakalahi, Jordan Tofa Halaifonua and Sinai Taukeiaho have journeyed from the Kingdom of Tonga to begin their medical studies at the Fiji National University’s College of Medicine, Nursing and Health Sciences (CMNHS).

The trio shares a dream of becoming doctors, with Fiji set to be their home for the next six years. “We are incredibly excited to be here and are already enjoying the experience,” they said.

Leaving loved ones was difficult, but Halaifonua, 25, reflected on the sacrifice: “It is a step I am willing to take to build a better future for myself and my family.”

Grateful for the opportunity, the students described their acceptance into CMNHS as a blessing.

“Through God’s grace, we have been given the chance to study at the Pacific’s premier medical school,” they shared.

Taukeiaho looks forward to building friendships across Fiji’s diverse communities, while Vakalahi sees the journey as both academic and personal growth.

“This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity, and I am determined to make the most of it,” she said.

Together, they embody determination, faith, and regional unity, showcasing how FNU continues to strengthen Pacific connections while shaping the next generation of healthcare professionals.

A Divine Call to Heal

By CHRISTAL KAPOOR

For Bernadette Lydia Rokoduru, the path to medicine began not in a classroom, but in prayer. She vividly recalls kneeling and asking God to reveal her purpose in life.

Today, the answer to her prayer has led her to the Fiji National University (FNU), where she has begun her journey as a first-year student in the Bachelor of Medicine and Bachelor of Surgery (MBBS) programme.

Bernadette is the only daughter of Malakai Rokoduru and one of three children in the family. Filled with pride and emotion, her father accompanied her on her first day at university, marking the beginning of what he describes as a dream long destined to unfold.

“Bernadette was born to be a doctor,” he said. “She is caring, kind, full of compassion and has a genuine love for people. Seeing her step into this new chapter makes me incredibly proud.”

The family first learnt of Bernadette’s acceptance into medical school earlier this year at the FNU Nausori Roadshow. For Malakai, the moment was both joyous and deeply affirming.

“I was surprised, not because she was incapable, but because she attended a private school, Nausori Baptist Christian Academy,” he explained. “Her brother is currently pursuing nursing, so her decision to study medicine beautifully complements his path. As a parent, I feel truly blessed and proud that both my children have been called by God to serve through healing.”

Bernadette shared that her journey was not without moments of doubt. When she first told her mother, who is currently in Zambia, about her dream of becoming a doctor, her mother was hesitant. However, witnessing Bernadette’s unwavering determination gradually changed her perspective.

A Young Woman's Journey into Agriculture

By ROMEKA KUMARI

Shruti Tanisha Kumar may not come from a farming background, but her curiosity about agriculture has planted a dream she is now ready to nurture.

The 19-year-old Suva resident was among the enthusiastic new students attending orientation at the Fiji National University (FNU), where she will pursue a Bachelor of Science majoring in Agriculture at the College of Agriculture, Fisheries and Forestry (CAFF).

A former student of Ahmadiyya Muslim College, Kumar's interest in agriculture grew from a desire to better understand food production and sustainability, subjects she believes are vital for the future.

"Agriculture affects every single person, whether we realise it or not. I want to learn how food is produced, how we can do it better, and how science can help feed our communities in a sustainable way," she said.

Despite not being raised on a farm, she never saw that as a limitation.

"You don't need to come from a farming family to care about agriculture. What matters is passion and the willingness to learn. I am starting from curiosity, and I hope to grow into knowledge," she said.

Accompanying her to orientation were her parents, Navin Kumar and Raghni Kumar, whose pride and support were evident throughout the day.

"My parents have always believed in my education. Having them by my side today reminds me that I'm not walking this journey alone," she said.

"I want to be part of solutions, solutions to food security, climate challenges and sustainable development. This is where my journey begins, and I'm excited for what lies ahead."

Michael - First in the Family to Pursue Medicine

By ROMEKA KUMARI

Ethan Michael is charting a new course for his family, becoming the first among his five siblings to pursue a career in medicine.

Hailing from Tuvalu, Ethan has embarked on a challenging yet deeply meaningful journey towards a Bachelor of Medicine and Bachelor of Surgery (MBBS) at the Fiji National University.

Supported by the Australia Awards Pacific Scholarship, funded by the Australian Government through the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade (DFAT), Ethan's achievement represents both personal determination and the fulfilment of a long-held family dream.

While his siblings have chosen different professional paths, Ethan felt a strong pull towards the medical field, one crafted by his upbringing and his parents' influence.

His mother works as a midwife nurse in Australia, and it was through watching her dedication to caring for others that his ambition took root.

"Growing up, I saw how my mum's work changed lives every day. She inspired me to see medicine not just as a job, but as a way of serving people when they need it most," Ethan shared.

Ethan also speaks proudly of honouring his parents' aspirations. His father, who works at The Pacific Community, instilled in him the value of service and commitment to the Pacific region.

"My parents always believed I could make a difference through medicine. Pursuing MBBS feels like I'm carrying their hopes with me, and that motivates me to push through every challenge," he said. Beginning his studies at FNU, Ethan is aware of the demands ahead, long hours, rigorous training, and time away from home. Yet, his focus remains clear.

"I want to return to Tuvalu one day as a qualified doctor and give back to the community that raised me," he added.

Guided by Heritage

By WATI TALEBULA

Kasanita Tuitubou carries the weight of heritage and hope with quiet determination.

Hailing from Tubou Village in Lakeba, Lau, with strong maternal links to Muanaicake Village in Fulaga, Lau, Kasanita's story is deeply rooted in the ocean and the values passed down through generations.

Her inspiration comes from her grandfather, a respected seafarer whose life at sea left a lasting impression.

"My grandfather was a seafarer, and I wanted to follow in his footsteps," Kasanita shared.

"I grew up hearing stories about him, and I knew from a young age that I wanted to be like him."

Those stories shaped her dreams and planted a sense of purpose that continues to guide her choices today.

Currently studying at SSKMC in Nadi, Kasanita balances her academic life with the responsibilities that come from being the eldest of six siblings.

In her family, leadership is not optional—it is expected.

"Since I am the eldest, I have to be an example to my younger siblings," she said.

"They look up to me, so I always try to do the right thing."

That sense of responsibility has strengthened her discipline and resilience. Whether in the classroom or at home, Kasanita understands that her actions set the tone for those who follow.

She sees education and personal growth as part of honouring her family and village.

Charting Her Nautical Journey

By WATI TALEBULA

Grace Loata Leba Matailela's passion for the maritime industry was sparked by both family influence and personal curiosity.

Coming from a family of retired navy officers, the sea has always been a strong presence in her life.

"Growing up, I was always inspired by the stories and discipline of the navy," she shared.

At just 19 years old, Grace is determined to follow a similar path by pursuing a Diploma in Nautical Science.

Originally from Navoci Village in Nadi, with maternal links to Dravuni, Ono in Kadavu, Grace attended SSKMC before exploring her future options.

Her interest became clearer after attending the Fiji National University (FNU) Open Day.

"The Open Day really helped me understand the programme better. I was able to ask questions and see if it was the right fit for me," she said.

Grace encourages other students to attend Open Days, emphasizing their importance.

"You get to know more about the programme and it helps you make confident decisions about your future," she advised.

Raised by a single mother, Grace credits her strength and resilience to her upbringing.

"My mum always reminds me to stay strong and never give up," she said.

This mindset continues to motivate her as she works towards becoming the person she is meant to be.

Riding Waves of Opportunity

By WATI TALEBULA

Eromi Uluiwaya, 19, from Navoci Village in Nadi with maternal roots in Moce Island, Lau, is charting a new course for his future.

As the eldest of three siblings, Eromi feels a strong responsibility to set a positive example.

His journey began at Votualevu College, where he developed a keen interest in marine engineering.

Eromi's path took a clear direction after attending the FNU Open Day, which motivated him to pursue a Diploma in Marine Engineering.

"The Open Day encouraged me to take up the course," he said, reflecting on the moment that sparked his ambition.

The experience opened his eyes to the opportunities available and strengthened his resolve to succeed.

Now, Eromi is committed to mastering the skills needed for a career at sea. He hopes to inspire his younger siblings and others from his village by proving that dedication and education can lead to a bright future.

Shot Put Athlete Seeks New Horizons

By ROMEKA KUMARI

Para-athlete Semiti Daunivalu Matanitobua has made his mark on the world stage through sport, and at 51, he is now charting a new path beyond competition.

He has taken a bold step toward self-improvement by enrolling at the Fiji National University.

Matanitobua is proving that age is no barrier to education or new beginnings.

Making his way to the FNU Orientation at the Nasinu Campus, Matanitobua was visibly excited about his new academic pursuit.

“I believe that learning is a lifelong journey. Age should never be a barrier. It’s about the passion to grow and improve oneself,” he said.

Hailing from a background of sporting excellence, Matanitobua has represented Fiji on the global stage in short put, a sport that has defined much of his life.

“Sport has given me so much—discipline, resilience, and the drive to succeed. But now, I am here to learn more, to understand the science behind sports and to prepare for life after my athletic journey.”

Despite the physical and mental demands of his sporting career, Matanitobua has always believed in continuous self-improvement.

“I came to pursue a Certificate in Sports Science because I want to understand my body better, to learn about the science behind training and performance,” he explained.

“This qualification is not just for me; it’s about inspiring others in my community that it’s never too late to chase your dreams.”

His motivation transcends personal achievement.

“I am doing this for my family and future generations. I want to show them that education is a lifelong pursuit. My journey isn’t over; it’s just beginning,” he said.

“This is my first formal university qualification, and I am determined to make the most of it. Every day is an opportunity to learn, to grow, and to redefine what I am capable of.”

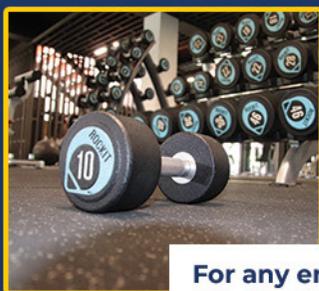

As he embarks on this new chapter, Matanitobua’s words resonate with many: “It’s never too late to start something new. Whether in sport or education, the key is to have the courage to take that first step. I am proof that with dedication and passion, anything is possible.”
