PRESS RELEASE

A total of 23 students from the Fiji National University's hospitality department will compete in various categories at this years Fiji Chefs Association Moffat National Salon Culinaire from Thursday 3 November to Saturday 5 November 2011.

Nine students from the National Training and Productivity Centre will also be showing their culinary skills.

The Moffat Fiji National Salon Culinaire is a three day event of cooking competitions for industry chefs and students being held on FNU's Nadi campus.

There are a total of 26 different class competitions which include specific events for student chefs, junior chefs, senior chefs and pastry chefs. The event will also determine the winners of the coveted titles of:

- Fiji Chef of the Year
- Fiji Pastry Chef of the Year
- Fiji Junior Chef of the Year

The various competitions are judged by local and international chefs, some of whom come from Australia and New Zealand.

The association said it was very grateful for the generous support and partnership with FNU.

The Moffat Fiji Chefs Salon Culinaire 2011 allows chefs from a range of establishments across Fiji to come together in one place to challenge each other, learn from and inspire one another, to exercise individual creativity and skills, and to drive their passion and professionalism to improve both their culinary career and the Fiji tourism experience.
