

CMNHS receives equipments and consumables from Uni Otago

The University of Otago's (UO) Pacific Health Unit has made a generous donation of lab equipments and consumables to the Fiji National University's (FNU) College of Medicine, Nursing and Health Sciences (CMNHS), further strengthening its long existing partnership between the two institutions.

"We would also like to express our sincere gratitude to everyone who has contributed to make this set of donation possible."

Dr Tuiketeki said the College will continue to work closely with University of Otago further boost learning and teaching enhancements.

University of Otago representative, Peni Qauqau, during the hand-over said: "the University places a lot of importance on maintaining its connections and links to the Pacific Island Countries".

"We hope that these equipments will help the students in their training and capacity building."

Qauqau said their unit saw CMNHS as a medium of reaching out to the Pacific since many students came from the region.

Dr Tima Tuiketeki receives donation equipments from Peni Qauqau.

Acting Dean CMNHS, Dr Timaima Tuiketeki while accepting the donation acknowledged UO's continued support towards enhancing tertiary education with its Pacific neighbours.

"This donation will enhance the learning outcomes of our students, something that is part of the strategic objectives of the College," Dr Tuiketeki said.

Dr Tima Tuiketeki with some staff of the College receives donation equipments from Peni Qauqau